Green coffee.

Our best-selling coffee comes from Brazil, which was the absolute first coffee producing and exporting country in the world. Brazilian coffee is usually harvested by hand picking, while some plantations use an automated method thanks to modern machines that are also used to harvest olives. Brazilian coffee is known on the international market because its name corresponds to its region of origin or production. The fine Arabicas are named after the port of Santos, which is the most important coffee port in the world. The Brazilian classification is considered the most complete and takes into account all aspects of a particular batch from a visual and olfactory point of view, as well as from a taste point of view.

In order to ensure the safe and efficient transport of coffee, a management system is in place, which verifies the condition of each loaded container, as well as the humidity to which the coffee is exposed. We only rely on the world's most capable and professional carriers.
